Handling Tobacco.
Farmers must not think the whole task is accomplished when they draw the fire from the barns, for there yet remains a good deal to be done. As soon as the tobacco is sufficiently soft to move, you may run up in the barn and crowd it close, or if the barn is needed for other curings the tobacco may be carried to the storage barn or bulked down in any dry house on the premises. But be sure that nothing is bulked with green stalk or swelled stems, for if such are placed down in bulk it will be sure to heat and utterly ruin. If your tobacco cured up nice and yellow do not let it hang too scattering in the barn for if it is exposed to the air or light it will lose its color to great extent. The best plan is to bulk it down soon as possible for it will then not only retain all of its color but will become very sweet, which is an important item to buyers. If your yellow tobacco has green streaks and stems in it take it up from the bulk in about one month, hang it loosely in the barn until it comes and goes in case a time or two, then bulk it down again and next spring you will be surprised to know what improvements it has undergone. If your tobacco is very green let it hang the greater part of the winter, for it will be benefited every time it comes and goes in case; but it should be bulked down for a while before you put it on the market. Tobacco requires a great deal of handling, even after the curing, in order to get it in the proper condition to sell. It is very seldom that tobacco brings satisfactory prices when it is taken from the stalk as soon as cured and rushed on the market. The best plan is to study well the character of your tobacco and then give it whatever it needs to put it in attractive shape for sale. Take your time in stripping and handling and see that it is done right. Do not trust this work to children or inexperienced farm hands, but superintend it yourself or get some good tobacco man to do it for you. The farmer loses a great deal of money by not having his crop in the right condition when he offers it for sale. No buyer will pay full market price for tobacco—no matter how good it is—unless it has been handled with the proper care. We know a man in one of the piedmont counties who raised a large crop of fine fillers and wrappers two years ago, but he bulked it down and then strapped over it while dry and then stripped and handed it dry, and as a consequence he had to sell the whole crop as scraps for manufacturing smoking tobacco at a loss of one-third or more. We see crops of this kind on every market. See that the leaf is in good fix for handling before you strip for it is impossible to make a neat and attractive hand when the tobacco is too dry. Fix up your hands nicely, bulk them down smoothly and then look after it closely and be sure that it was not in too high case when bulked.

The leaf should be plant and in high enough case to keep it from breaking but the stem at the big end should not be soft. You will find it time well spent to handle your tobacco well before putting it on the market.

LIFE'S CHIVALRY.
(Chambers Journal.)
Where in the busy city's core and strife,
To thrust for riches and to sell for bread,
Is found that soul of chivalry in life
Which seeks for nobility for bread?
Shall we seek for it in the forest glade,
In hoary, dim cathedral, gray with age,
In cloister where the silent knights are laid
With rusted lance, no further war to wage?
In mouldering castle or in ivied tower,
Where pomp and pageantry were wont to be?
Ah! no. But yet the ancient spirit's power
Is with us, and its form, if we would see,
To labor cheerfully from hour to hour,
To do good graciously is chivalry.

How Mr. Cox Made His Book.
(See Cleveland Leader.)
I happen to know a great deal more about the making of Mr. Cox's book than you will find between the covers. I was in the midst of his work upon it, and talked with him as to its construction and his habits of work. I said he to me one night: "The secret of my accomplishing so much work lies in my power of method and analysis. I went to school at Brown University, and there I came in contact with Dr. Wayland, the man who wrote the 'Political Economy.' The doctor was a great advocate of thought analysis, and he trained his students to make an outline of everything they took up. The practice of this method in a short time leads one to think analytically, and before I commenced my book I had a skeleton of the whole thing in my mind. I conceived the idea of it before Blaine began his Twenty Years in Congress, and the writing of it was only filling in the flesh and blood of the skeleton which I had already constructed."

The Cattle Business.
(W. A. Paxton, "Cattle King," in Inter Ocean.)
The cattle business is on such a basis now that a man must have money as well as luck to do well in it. In other words, it has passed under the control of big companies and there is at present but one owner where a few years ago there were forty. Last year was a bad one because of the depreciation in price, but I believe that we have now reached bottom, and that the reaction will soon be felt. At least I have been playing it that way. I have bought over 100,000 cattle, in three herds, on the strength of my opinion. It may happen that I have gone in a year too soon, but I feel that I have only got in time to take advantage of the rise of next year. English cattlemen, I should judge, are not of my opinion. Anyway, they have not been investing much money in our country this year, but that is where they have made a mistake.

Origin of a Peasage.
(Hutchinson.)
An anecdote in the Gravelle memoirs gives an edifying idea as to why peers of England may come to exist:
"Mr. Gravelle one day asked his cousin, Lord Glastonbury, what had induced him to get made a peer, for he could not think he had ever cared much for a title. He said: 'God, devil, for such it seems, was his queer habit of expressing himself.' I'll tell you. I never thought of a peasage; but one day I took up the newspaper, and I read in it that Tommy Townshend was made a peer. Confound the fellow, said I, what right had he to be made a peer, I should like to know. Why, I am as rich again as he is, and have a much better right. So I resolved to write to Pitt and tell him so. I wrote and was made a peer the following week."

A Veteran Locomotive Engineer.
(Exchange.)
A locomotive driver who can point to forty years of uninterrupted service without a single accident is not a man to be met with every day. Such a one is a Saxon engine driver of the name of Henze, who has just gone into retirement. During his forty years of railway riding Henze has traveled a distance of 238,347 geographical miles, or 1,900,105 kilometers—in other words, a distance equal to forty-seven journeys round the earth.

A Novel Flower-Holder.
(Chicago Times.)
In the garden of a residence on the banks of the Delaware, near Chester, a ship's yawl been set upright, painted red, and turned into a flower-holder. Living blossoms and foliage plants fill it from stem to stem and climb its mast and twine about its rigging.

The Sacred Kaaba.
The silk covering for the kaaba which the sultan sent this year to Mecca is worth 15,400 pounds sterling, and that sent by the khedive for the same purpose is valued at 25,000 pounds sterling. The kaaba is the sacred stone at the tomb of Mohammed, to kiss which the faithful make long pilgrimages.

SCROFULA CURED.
Dr. L. A. Gault, Atlanta, says: B. B. E. cured Wm. Seakof of a terrible case of Scrofula, which affected the entire elbow joint.
ANOTHER CASE.
East Point, Ga., April 2, 1884.
My wife has been afflicted with a terrible form of Scrofula for over ten years. Physicians exhausted their skill, and numerous patent medicines were used without benefit. Her condition grew worse—her appetite failed, attended with debility, emaciation, falling out of the hair and a frightful breaking out of the skin. Her bones became very much diseased and painful (some) causing it white swelling, with sleepless nights and a general feeling of horror. Some friend said that B. B. E. would cure her. I procured it and placed her upon its use, and to the utter astonishment of all who knew her the recovery was rapid and complete. It acted as a powerful tonic, gave her a splendid appetite and acted upon the kidneys. A few bottles did the work. The action of B. B. E. was decidedly quick, and the medicine cost but little. I advise my friends to use it as a blood purifier. Yours truly,
R. M. LAWSON.

BLOOD POISON.
Mr. A. F. W., of Hampton, Ga., has recently emerged from one of the most remarkable cases of Blood Poison on record. His body and limbs had no less than four hundred small ulcers—his bones tormented him with pain—his appetite failed—his kidneys presented frightful symptoms—and all doctors and 100 bottles of the most popular Blood Poison remedy failed to give him any relief. He secured B. B. E., the concentrated quick cure, and five bottles healed up the ulcers, relieved his pain, cured his kidneys, restored his appetite, and made him a healthy and happy man. Any one can secure his full name and correct with him.
